The yellow fog that rubs its back upon the window-panes, The yellow smoke that rubs its muzzle on the window panes, Licked its tongue into the corners of the evening, Lingered upon the pools that stand in drains, Let fall upon its back the soot that falls from chimneys, Slipped by the terrace, made a sudden leap, And seeing that it was a soft October night, Curled once about the house, and fell asleep. And indeed there will be time For the yellow smoke that slides along the street Rubbing its back upon the window-panes; There will be time, there will be time To prepare a face to meet the faces that you meet; There will be time to murder and create. And time for all the works and days of hands That lift and drop a question on your plate; Time for you and time for me, And time yet for a hundred visions and revisions,

[3]

Before the taking of a toast and tea.

In the room the women come and go Talking of Michelangelo.

[2,4]

And indeed there will be time

To wonder, 'Do I dare?' and, 'Do I dare?'

Time to turn back and descend the stair,

With a bald spot in the middle of my hair

(They will say: 'How his hair is growing thin!')

My morning coat, my collar mounting firmly to the chin,

My necktie rich and modest, but asserted by a simple pin—

(They will say: 'But how his arms and legs are thin!')

Do I dare

Disturb the universe?

In a minute there is time

For decisions and revisions which a minute will reverse.

[5]

S'io credessi che mai risposta fosse a persona che mai tornasse al mondo, questa fiamma staria senza pi $\bar{u}$  scosse. Ma per ciò che giammai di questo fondo non-tornó vivo alcun, s'i'odo il vero senza tema d'infamia ti rispondo.

[0]

And sawdust restaurants with oyster-shells: Streets that follow like a tedious argument

To lead you to an overwhelming question... Oh, do not ask, Let us go and make our visit "What is it?"

When the evening is spread out against the sky Of restless nights in one-night cheap hotels go through certain half-deserted streets Like a patient etherised upon a The muttering retreats

Let us

Let us

For I have known them all already, known them all— Have known the evenings, mornings, afternoons, I have measured out my life with coffee spoons; I know the voices dying with a dying fall Beneath the music from a farther room. So how should I presume?

[6]

And I have known the eyes already, known them all— Eyes that fix you in a formulated phrase, And when I am formulated, sprawling on a pin, When I am pinned and wriggling on the wall, Then how should I begin To spit out all the butt-ends of my days and ways?

And how should I presume?

And I have known the arms already, known them all—Arms that are braceleted and white and bare (But in the lamplight, downed with light brown hair!) Is it perfume from a dress
That makes me so digress
Arms that lie along a table, or wrap about a shawl.
And should I then presume?
And how should I begin?

[8]

.....

And the afternoon, the evening, sleeps so peacefully! Smoothed by long fingers,

Asleep...tired... or it malingers,

Stretched out on the floor, here beside you and me.

Should I, after tea and cakes and ices,

Have the strength to force the moment to its crisis?

But though I have wept and fasted, wept and prayed,

Though I have seen my head (grown slightly bald) brought in upon a platter,

I am no prophet - and here's no great matter;

I have seen the moment of my greatness flicker,

And I seen the eternal Footman hold my coat, and snicker,

And in short, I was afraid.

[11]

And would it have been worth it, after all,

Would it have been worth while,

After the sunsets and the dooryards and the sprinkled streets,

After the novels, after the teacups, after the skirts that trail along the floor —

And this, and so much more?—

But as if a magic lantern threw the nerves in patterns on a screen:

Would it have been worth while

If one, settling a pillow or throwing off a shawl,

And turning toward the window, should say:

'That is not it at all,

That is not what I meant at all.'

[13]

I have seen them riding seaward on the waves

Combing the white hair of the waves blown back

When the wind blows the water white and black.[18] We have lingered in the chambers of the sea

By sea-girls wreathed with seaweed red and brown

Till human voices wake us, and we drown. [19]

Shall I say, I have gone at dusk through narrow streets And watched the smoke that rises from the pipes Of lonely men in shirt-sleeves, leaning out of windows?

[9]

I should have been a pair of ragged claws Scuttling across the floors of silent seas.

[10]

Anong the cups, the marmalade, the tea,

Would it have been worth it, after all,

Would it have been worth while,

To have bitten of the matter with asmie,

To roll it toward some overwhelming asmie,

To say: I am Lazarus, come from the dead,

If one, settling a pillow by her head,

That is not what I meant at all.

No! I am not Prince Hamlet, nor was meant to be;
Am an attendand lord, one that will do
To swell a progress, start a scene or two,
Advise the prince; no doubt, an easy tool,
Deferential, glad to be of use,
Politic, cautious and meticulous;
Full of high sentence, but a bit obtuse;
At times, indeed, almost ridiculous —
Almost, at times, the Fool.

[14]

I grow old... ...blo worg I

I shall wear the bottoms of my trousers rolled. [15] Shall I part my hair behind? Do I dare to eat a peach?

I shall wear white flannel trousers, and walk upon the beach.

I have heard the mermaids singing, each to each. [16] I do not think that they will sing to me. [17]

